HISTORIC MEETINGS. MODERN THINKING.

For generations, St. Ermin's has been a place where conversations mattered, from Churchill and influential political figures to the beginnings of the SOE and London's world of espionage.

Today, St. Ermin's is more than a place to meet. It's a place to think, talk, dine, create and celebrate, in the heart of Westminster.

Across 15 meeting and event spaces and four dedicated breakout spaces, we can host up to 200 guests, from intimate gatherings to larger occasions. A dedicated podcast studio and private screening room open up even more possibilities.

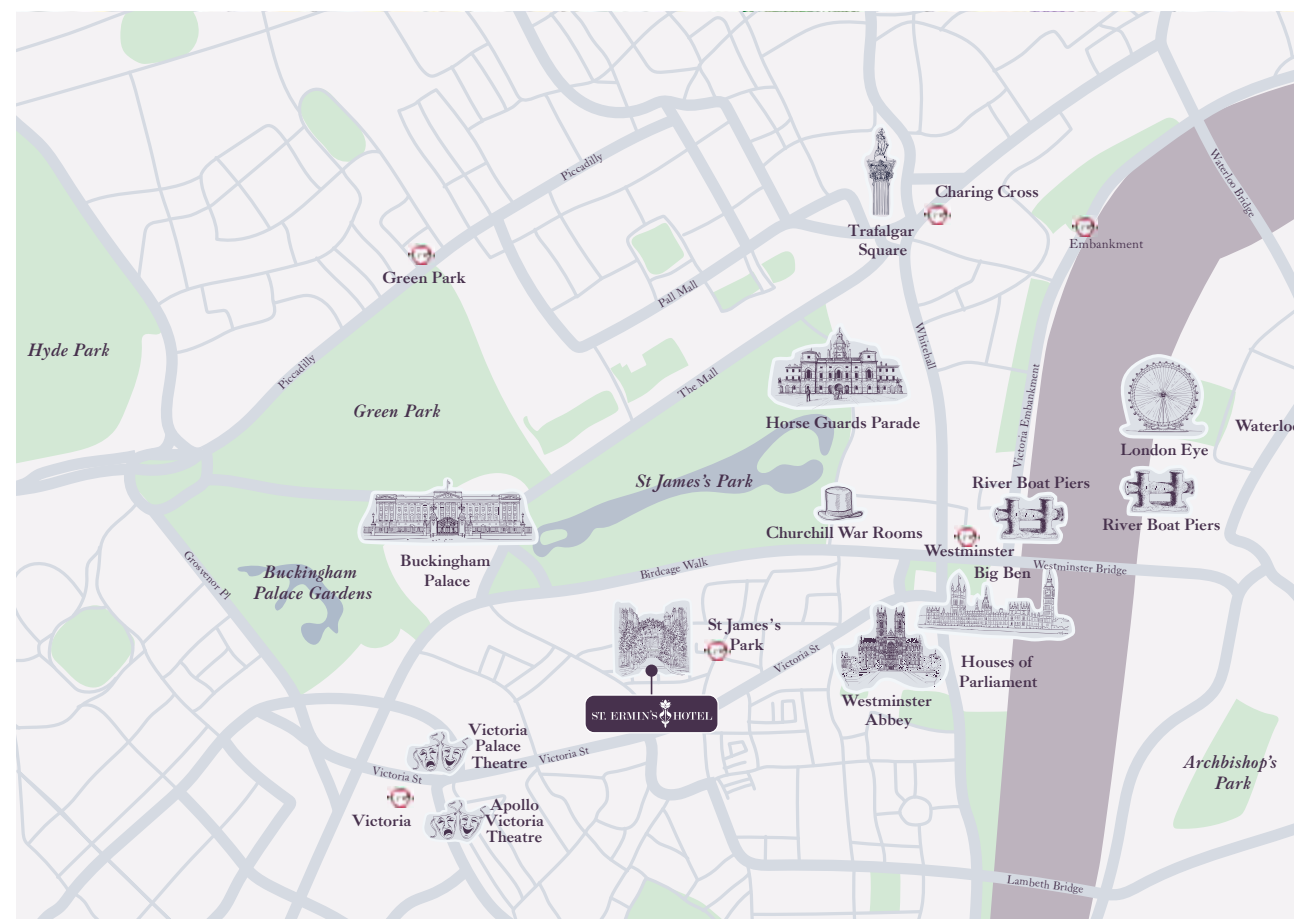

Historic character, contemporary design and thoughtful hospitality – everything you need to meet, connect, create and celebrate.

A LOCATION THAT MEANS BUSINESS.

At the heart of Westminster.
At the centre of London business.

St. Ermin's puts you at the centre of Westminster's political, commercial and conference district, within walking distance of major conference venues, government institutions and some of London's most iconic landmarks.

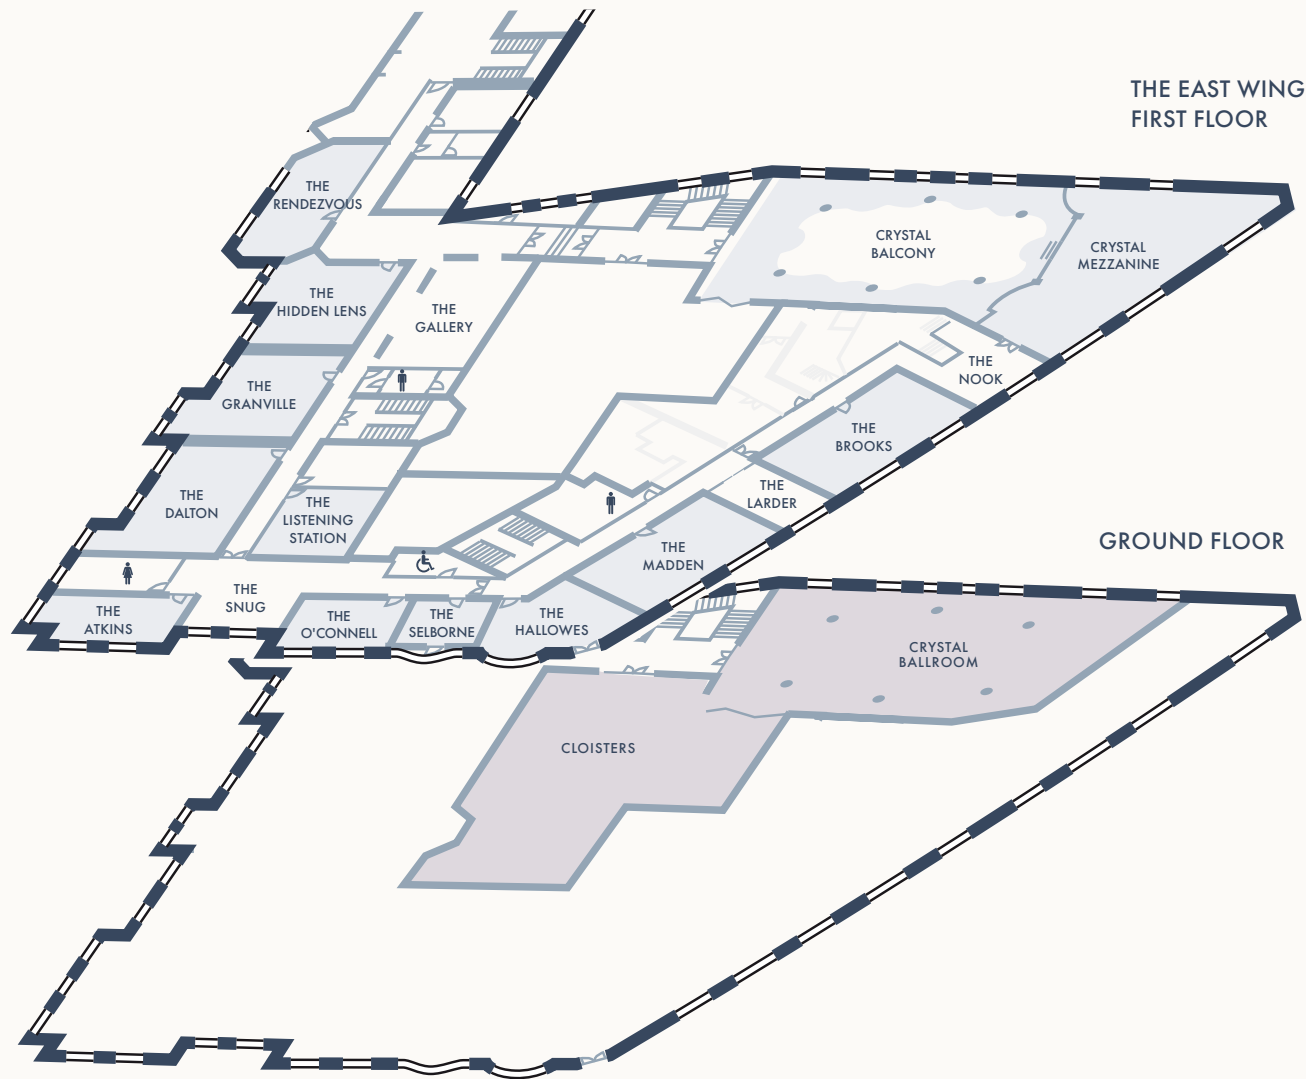

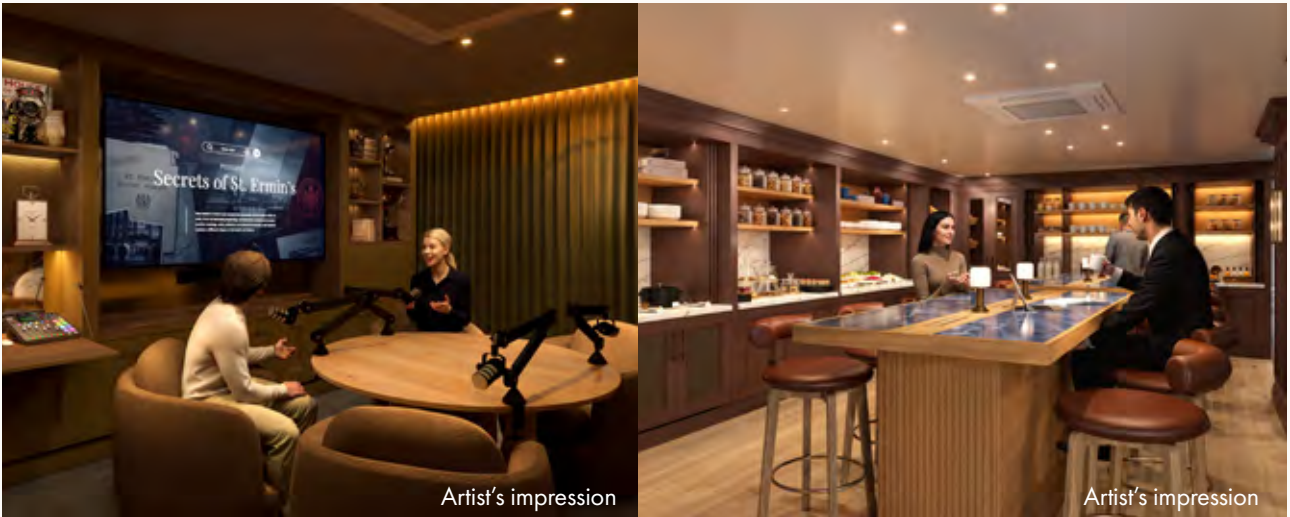

St. James's Park Underground is just next door, with Westminster and Victoria mainline and Underground stations within easy walking distance. With multiple Underground lines, mainline rail and connections to London's airports all close at hand, getting to the hotel, and getting around, couldn't be easier.

- 2 mins  St. James's Park underground station
- 5 mins  Major Westminster conference venues
- 8 mins  Houses of Parliament
- 10 mins  Westminster underground station
- 10 mins  Victoria mainline & underground station

MEETING & EVENT SPACES WITH A STORY

Distinctive spaces where modern thinking meets historic character.

From the contemporary East Wing to the historic Crystal Ballroom and Cloisters, every space at St. Ermin's has a story to tell.

History is woven into the fabric of the hotel – from original Rococo plasterwork to rooms whose names nod to St. Ermin's fascinating connections with espionage and intelligence, inspired by the secret meetings, remarkable characters and covert conversations that once took place within these walls.

CRYSTAL BALLROOM

A room made for occasion.

Rich in history and theatrical detail, the Crystal Ballroom brings a sense of occasion to everything from gala dinners, celebrations and weddings to conferences and larger events.

Originally designed by theatre designer J. B. Briggs, the room retains many of its original features, with its magnificent crystal chandelier taking centre stage.

For larger gatherings, the Ballroom connects with the Cloisters and Crystal Mezzanine, creating an impressive setting for events of up to 480 guests.

CRYSTAL MEZZANINE

Individual in character. Naturally connected.

Set just off the dramatic Crystal Ballroom Balcony, the Crystal Mezzanine combines original plasterwork and natural light with the flexibility to meet, dine and celebrate.

Used on its own, it's an elegant setting for meetings, dinners and receptions. For larger occasions, it connects with the Crystal Ballroom and Cloisters, bringing the three spaces together for events of up to 480 guests.

CLOISTERS SUITE

Historic in character. Made to come together.

Originally a banqueting hall, the century-old Cloisters retains all the character of its past, with striking Rococo plasterwork and a distinctive vaulted ceiling. Today, it provides an atmospheric setting for private dining, parties, conferences and events.

Connected to the Crystal Ballroom, it can also become part of a larger occasion, allowing guests to move effortlessly from meeting to dining, reception to celebration.

LOBBY MEZZANINE

Overlooking the hotel's dramatic lobby, this semi-private mezzanine is surrounded by St. Ermin's original Rococo plasterwork, with intricate scrollwork and flowing details inspired by theatrical designer J. P. Briggs.

An atmospheric setting for drinks receptions before or after an event, it also works beautifully as a standalone space for informal gatherings and celebrations.

THE TERRACE

Take the conversation outside.

Overlooking St. Ermin's lush courtyard, the outdoor terrace offers a refreshing change of scene for drinks receptions, informal gatherings and breakout sessions for up to 70- 100 guests.

Whether paired with an event at St. Ermin's or one of Westminster's neighbouring conference venues, it's a relaxed setting to step outside, catch up and round off the day in the open air.

HISTORIC MEETINGS

Secrets, spies and conversations that shaped history.

St. Ermin's has witnessed its fair share of intrigue. During the Second World War, the hotel became closely entwined with Britain's intelligence community. In 1940, a meeting held here by Winston Churchill helped set in motion the creation of the Special Operations Executive (SOE), the secret organisation tasked with espionage, sabotage and supporting resistance movements across occupied Europe.

The hotel's clandestine connections continued long after the war. In the 1950s, Guy Burgess, one of the Cambridge Five, is said to have met his Russian contact in the Caxton Bar, passing secret papers beneath the very roof where guests were drinking and dining.

Today, a display of original Second World War SOE field equipment in the lobby provides a fascinating glimpse into this less visible side of St. Ermin's history.

Some stories are hidden in plain sight.

The East Wing quietly draws on this extraordinary past. Room names, artwork and carefully considered details reference some of the characters and stories associated with the world of wartime intelligence, interpreted through a distinctly contemporary lens.

The Granville takes its name from Christine Granville (Krystyna Skarbek), the celebrated Polish-born agent who became Britain's longest-serving female agent of the Second World War. The Selborne references Roundell Palmer, 3rd Earl of Selborne, who took ministerial responsibility for the SOE in 1942.

Rather than recreating the past, these references are deliberately understated – woven into the names, art and design, waiting to be discovered.

GROUP STAYS

Historic character.
Modern comfort.

With 331 rooms and suites and up to 180 rooms available per group, St. Ermin's makes it easy to bring everyone together under one roof. Comfortable bedrooms and welcoming spaces throughout the hotel give delegates somewhere to catch up, work or unwind beyond the meeting room.

Our Westminster location keeps travel simple too. St. James's Park Underground station is moments away, with Victoria and Westminster stations within easy reach. Some of Westminster's key conference venues, including the QEII Centre, Central Hall Westminster, Church House Westminster and One Great George Street, are all a short walk from the hotel.

From breakfast before the day begins to drinks when the meeting ends, staying at St. Ermin's means less time travelling and more time together.
